Forecast For Northeast England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Tuesday 06 Jul 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Persistent rain easing this morning. Slow-moving heavy downpours later.

Today:
Early heavy rain clearing and gradually turning brighter for most parts through the morning. Sunny spells and heavy, thundery showers developing into the afternoon, with locally torrential and slow-moving downpours in places. Maximum temperature 20 deg C (68 deg F).

Tonight:
Heavy showers will ease through this evening and decent clear spells should develop overnight. Remaining dry through until morning with light winds. Minimum temperature 9 deg C (48 deg F).

Wednesday:
Dry and with sunny spells through the morning. Occasional showers by the afternoon, but generally not as heavy, or as widespread as Tuesday. Warm in the sunshine. Maximum temperature 23 deg C (73 deg F).

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:
Sunshine and showers again Thursday, though much drier than in recent days. Similar on Friday. A fine start Saturday, but heavy showers developing again by the afternoon.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.